Horrible Case of Brigandage.
The French papers publish a startling account of an atrocious piece of brigandage which occurred very recently at a village in the south of France. The village was named 'Le Village de la Croix'. The brigands, who were about 100 in number, entered the village at night, and committed the most atrocious crimes. They killed many of the inhabitants, and carried off a large number of the women and children. The village was left in a state of complete desolation. The French government has sent a large force to the village, and they are now engaged in a desperate struggle with the brigands. How is Immigration of the Right sort to be Promoted?
All will agree that industrious young men and young women in about equal proportions, if married to each other, constitute the most desirable class of immigrants, in every point of view, and in point of fact, it is the class which Australia seeks out and helps, and that the British Government has most need of expense to attract to the colonies. It is therefore clear that Canada should provide as well as she can for such desirable immigrants when they come to our shores, and it affords us much pleasure, in this connection, to lay the following proposals of our Chief Agent for the settlement of the agricultural population of Canada. The plan does not appear to us to be sufficiently explained, but it is a plan which we think it better to publish, than to keep it secret.
